Biographical/historical note:

Clarence E. Manion, lawyer, educator, broadcaster, author, and lecturer, was born in Henderson, Kentucky, on July 7, 1896. He received an A.B. degree from St. Mary's College in St. Mary, Kentucky, in 1915 and a Master's degree in philosophy from the Catholic University of America in 1917. Manion became a teacher of history and government at Notre Dame University in 1919. In 1922, after receiving a J.D. degree from Notre Dame, he was admitted to the Indiana Bar. He practiced law in Evansville until 1925, when he rejoined the Notre Dame faculty, this time as a Professor of Constitutional Law.

In 1936, he married Virginia ("Gina") O'Brien. They had five children.

In 1936 also he established a private law practice in South Bend, named Doran and Manion, which in 1958 became the firm of Doran, Manion, Boynton, and Kamm. Manion became Dean of Notre Dame's Law School in 1941 and held this position until he retired from the university in 1952. Even after his retirement, he was often referred to as "Dean" Manion although his closest associates called him "Pat". In addition to his flourishing law practice, Manion owned considerable land in the South Bend area.

Manion was appointed Chairman of the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in September 1953. The Commission, made up of U.S. senators and representatives and other prominent citizens, was appointed to study the federal government's relationship to the states, particularly in fiscal matters. Manion's support of the Bricker Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, designed to limit the president's treaty-making powers, apparently made him a political liability to the Eisenhower administration. He resigned his chairmanship in February 1954 at the request of the President.

This event marked the transition to a new career. Manion, who earlier in his life had been a registered Democrat and even a "New Dealer" went on to become one of the leading exponents of and spokesmen for political conservatism in the United States. In addition to his writings and public addresses, Manion delivered a short series of radio broadcasts in 1954 expressing a conservative viewpoint. The broadcasts proved so popular that the series was extended, becoming known as the Manion Forum. The Forum first consisted of commentaries by Manion, but the format later was changed to include guest speakers and interviews with them. At one time or another, most of the leading conservatives of the day were guests of the Manion Forum. Weekly programs were broadcast nation-wide on radio and later on television as well until Manion's death, July 28, 1979.

Apart from his Manion Forum radio and television broadcasts, Clarence Manion was best known for his role in prompting the Presidential candidacy of Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona. Manion was active in attempting to secure Goldwater's nomination in 1960. His publication and distribution of Goldwater's book, The Conscience of a Conservative, gave impetus to the Goldwater cause. Goldwater became the Republican Party's standard bearer in 1964, but Manion was less involved in the 1964 campaign than he had been in 1960.

Summary description of the collection:

Clarence Manion's papers are comprised of incoming correspondence and carbon copies of outgoing letters; transcripts of Manion Forum broadcasts, 1954-1979; and publications advocating conservative positions on American domestic and foreign affairs, including monographs written or published by Manion; speeches, news clippings, and other materials. The manuscript of Barry Goldwater's book, Conscience of a Conservative is included.

Topics discussed in the collection include advocacy for the Bricker Amendment; activities of the John Birch Society in California and elsewhere; support for Goldwater's presidential campaigns in 1960 and 1964; Manion's appointment to and resignation from the federal Commission on Intergovernmental Relations; Manion's service on the American Bar Association's Committee for the Study of Communist Tactics, Strategy and Objectives; the threat of Communist expansion abroad and internal subversion; U.S. military preparedness; and the extension of the power of the federal government in domestic affairs; Manion's activities as a professor of constitutional law at Notre Dame University, and his businesses, and family. Correspondents include William F. Buckley, Jr., General Bonner Fellers, Barry Goldwater, J. Bracken Lee, J. Fred Schlafly, Phyllis Schlafly, Paul Talbert, and Robert Welch.

The papers not only state Dean Manion's personal views on history and political theory. They also document conservative thought and action in America because of the extraordinary breadth of Manion's contacts on the political right as well as the wide reach of his radio and television programs. Correspondents include personal friends as well as members of the general public who listened to the Manion Forum; public officials and political leaders; and conservative publicists, theoreticians, and organizers.

Description of some material related to the collection:

Related materials at Chicago History Museum, Research Center, include the Clarence Manion photograph collection (1981.0117) and a complete run of the Manion Forum Newsletter cataloged separately. A complete collection of audio recordings of Manion Forum radio broadcasts, 1954-1979, on 1294 reels was given to Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Michigan, by Mrs. Manion in 1980.

Series 5. Publications and other materials, 1926-1976 (box 113-119)

Detailed description of archival series in the collection:

Series 1. Correspondence, 1922-1978 (box 1-56)

Series 1 is almost entirely composed of incoming letters and carbon copies of Manion's replies to Manion Forum broadcast listeners across the nation, Conservative friends and associates, and to a lesser extent, congressmen and other government officials. A large portion of this correspondence relates to the Manion Forum and concerns arrangements for guest speakers as well as listeners' reactions to topics such as foreign aid, taxation, nuclear test bans, social security, farm legislation, civil rights, Cubs, and socialist and Communist forces at work in the U.S. and abroad. Besides correspondence, this series also contains some legal briefs, news clippings and other items. Some of the incoming letters from prominent individuals in this collection are copies of originals which were retained by the Manion family. For the convenience of the researcher, selected correspondence has been moved from its original file location in Series 1 and re-filed into other series of the Manion papers in order to consolidate materials related to certain important topics in a single location. However, the remaining correspondence is wide-ranging and touches upon many of the topics that appear in the other series.

Series 1 is made up of three subseries, the first arranged strictly by date from 1922 to 1965; the second, arranged by year and then filed alphabetically by correspondent's name within each year from 1966 to 1979; Subseries 3 contains correspondence with selected prominent persons filed under the name, 1961-1979. It is sometimes possible to find a letter to/from or about the same person in each of the subseries.

Of special interest in Subseries 1, Chronological correspondence, are: 1927-1928 materials including correspondence with Nicholas Murray Butler about Manion's article, "What Price Prohibition?"; a few items relative to Manion's interest in running for elective office, including an April 25, 1940, letter concerning his withdrawal from the U.S. congressional race in Indiana and an August 7, 1933, news clipping on his interest in Indiana's U.S. Senate seat; and papers concerning Manion's opposition to U.S. entry into World War II, including letters to U.S. senators and correspondence with General Robert E. Wood, chairman of the "America First" committee.

Subseries 1 also contains various materials relating to Dean Manion's association with Notre Dame University. Papers from the 1940s discuss the possibility of closing the Law School for the duration of World War II. An August 4, 1944 letter from the President of Notre Dame, Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, comments on the admission of an African American student in the Law School.

In the 1953-1954 files, the publication and distribution of Clarence Manion's The Key to Peace, a textbook on U.S. government and the Constitution, is discussed. Materials concerning the aims, formation, and membership of "For America," a group working to promote peace, "Americanism," and national defense, and to oppose Communism and totalitarianism, are present in the files from 1954 onward as are materials relating to the John Birch Society.

Subseries 2, Alphabetical correspondence, dates from 1966 to the year of Manion's death, 1979; it lacks files "N" - "Z" for 1971. However, it is sometimes possible to find a letter to/from or about the same person in each of the subseries.

Subseries 3 contains correspondence with selected prominent persons filed under the name, 1961-1979. However, it is sometimes possible to find a letter to/from or about the same person in each of the subseries.

Some of the correspondents whom Manion regarded as "most prominent" were kept separately filed after 1964 (subseries 3), including National Review editor William F. Buckley, Jr., Senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Chicago Tribune editor/reporter Clayton Kirkpatrick, William F. Rickenbacker of the "Rickenbacker Report" and California insurance executive Paul H. ("Tex") Talbert. The Talbert correspondence is of special interest in relation to the John Birch Society. Talbert was an officer of the Society who was critical of its national leader Robert Welch. The "prominent personalities" files have been retained as separate entities, but the researcher should be aware that correspondence with these persons also may be found in Series 1, Subseries 1 and 2, and elsewhere in the Manion papers.

Series 2. Topical correspondence and clippings, 1950-1978 (box 57-81)

Series 2 consists primarily of subject files maintained by Clarence Manion to which have been added smaller lots of subject files from other series of the Manion Papers as well as some isolated files. The "Manion biographical files" (filed under "M" document some aspects of Clarence Manion's activities apart from the Manion Forum. The "Chicago Historical Society" files contain materials that Manion set aside because he thought they would be of special interest to researchers at CHS. The range of materials contained in this series is illustrated by the following descriptions of three of the larger topics: an American Bar Association committee on Communism, 1950-1953; the Bricker Amendment, 1953-1957; and Harry Goldwater's presidential campaigns, 1959-1964.

The American Bar Association Committee for the Study of Communist Tactics, Strategy, and Objectives was formed to study communist activities in relation to proper court procedure and law enforcement. This group of files include correspondence (a good deal of it with Austin F. Canfield, the Committee's chairman), minutes of meetings and other related papers. A major subject is the drafting and publication of the ABA's "Brief on Communism: Marxism-Leninism, Its Aims, Purposes, Objectives and Practices" in 1951. The Committee also considered a proposal to poll its members in order to discover if any of them were members of Marxist-Leninist organizations or the National Lawyers Guild, which was suspected of Communist leanings.

The files on the Bricker Amendment consist of Clarence Manion's correspondence with individuals, including Senator John Bricker, and organizations which advocated the passage of the Bricker Amendment or similar legislation to check the treaty-making powers of the U.S. President. News clippings and other printed materials amplify the correspondence. Scattered references to Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin occur in the correspondence. Lyndon B. Johnson, then a senator from Texas, stated his opposition to the Bricker amendment in a letter which is attached to Arthur C. Hughes' letter of February 4, 1954. The Bricker Amendment files also contain a photocopy of a letter from Supreme Court Justice Sherman Minton (February 25, 1954) in which he takes issue with a Manion Forum broadcast on the Court's decision in the steel seizure case.

The Barry Goldwater files (box 68-71) begin with Minton's efforts to organize a committee and to rally support for Goldwater's efforts to secure the Republican Party's presidential or vice-presidential nomination in 1960. Of special interest is an 18-page abstract of the minutes of a Goldwater for President meeting at the Union League Club in Chicago, January 23, 1960. A major subject of the Goldwater files is the 1960 publication and distribution by Clarence Manion of Goldwater's book, Conscience of a Conservative, which played an important role in securing the presidential nomination for Goldwater in 1964.

The 1960 campaign materials discuss, in some detail and depth, both the philosophy and strategy of the Goldwater candidacy, specifically the relevancy of Goldwater's campaign to the cause of conservatism in the United States, Republican strength in the South, and the role of the civil rights question in the campaign. During February and March 1959, correspondents comment on the advisability of establishing a third major political party in the United States on conservative lines.

Less material from the 1964 campaign is present, but noteworthy is Manion's letter to Senator Barry Goldwater of June 12, 1964, in which Manion suggested William Miller of New York as Goldwater's vice-presidential candidate. Miller later became Goldwater's running mate in the campaign.

Some of the prominent individuals whose correspondence is filed with the Goldwater topical files (and also found elsewhere in the collation) are J. Bracken Lee, former governor of Utah and head of "For America," Bonner Fellers, William F. Buckley, Jr., L. Brent Bozell, and William J. Dorn. There is also a good deal of correspondence with cattleman Hubbard Russell of Maricopa, California, treasurer of the sponsoring committee for Conscience of a Conservative, which purchased the book in lots in order to be able to distribute it at a discount.

Series 3. Manion Forum, 1954-1979 (box 81-109)

Series 3 contains material generated in connection with Manion Forum broadcasts, including a complete set of transcripts of radio and television programs from October 3, 1954, through August 19, 1979, copies of Manion Forum publications, correspondence from contributors and supporters, and some financial records. This series cover all broadcasts, beginning with the first.

A complete collection of audio tape recordings of Manion Forum radio broadcasts from 1954 to 1979 on 1294 reels was given to Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Michigan, by Mrs. Manion in 1980.

Of special interest in Series 3 is correspondence and other papers concerning the cancellation by the Mutual Broadcasting System network stations of an October 10, 1957, Manion Forum broadcast by Herbert V. Kohler, president of the Kohler Company near Sheboygan, Wisconsin. In this broadcast (which was carried by stations not affiliated with the Mutual network), Kohler criticized actions of the United Auto Workers in their strike against his company. The Mutual system refused to broadcast the program on the grounds that it could lead to legal action against the broadcasters, even though Herbert Kohler agreed to reimburse any judgment claim against the network. In addition to correspondence with Kohler and letters of support from Manion Forum listeners, Series 3 also contains items relative to the cancellation of the Manion Forum's contract with the Mutual system as a result of this censorship.

Series 4. Speeches, 1941-1978 (box 109-113)

Series 4. is arranged by date. The series consists primarily of texts of speeches around the country by Manion as advocate of conservatism between 1941 and 1978 but also occasionally includes related correspondence, clippings, or programs. (Some routine correspondence concerning travel and lodging arrangements in connection with speeches between 1961 and 1965 is found also in Series 1, subseries 1). During the early 1960s, Manion addressed a number of young conservative organizations on college campuses.

Series 5. Publications and other materials, 1926-1976 (box 113-119)

Series 5 contains books and pamphlets written or published by Clarence Manion. Most of the series is arranged alphabetically by title, usually with a copy of the publication preceding any manuscript materials about the publication.

Also include is a box of computer printouts (box 117: Closed to researchers); a box of appointment and desk books; a box of correspondence, 1926-1972; and one oversize folder.
