Biographical/historical note:

The Jewish Council on Urban Affairs (JCUA) is a Jewish organization committed to addressing Chicago's urban problems, such as homelessness, joblessness, and racial tension and discrimination. Through its vision of empowering communities from within, JCUA also pursues social and economic justice for Chicago's most vulnerable neighborhoods. Founded in 1964, JCUA has assisted groups in low-income communities, built coalitions with diverse groups, advocated on issues of poverty and racism and mobilized a Jewish constituency. As of 2014, JCUA offices were in the Loop community area.

Summary description of the collection:

Correspondence, newspaper clippings, bulletins, reports, staff records, topical files, planning files, accounting documents, meeting minutes, and other office files of the Jewish Council on Urban Affairs (JCUA), about its own operations, its relations with other organizations, and topical files on urban problems. JCUA, founded in 1964, is a Jewish organization working to address Chicago's urban problems, such as homelessness, joblessness, and racial tension and discrimination. The collection includes materials by JCUA leaders Rabbi Robert Marx, Lew Kreinberg, and Jane Ramsey.

Collection written in English.

Description of some material related to the collection:
